IDEAS FOR VIRTUAL AND AT HOME FUNDRAISING

Here are some of our favourite virtual fundraising ideas. They're inspired by our Five Ways to Wellbeing advice, so you can take care of your own mental health while you transform the lives of people all across Scotland!

Got your idea already? Let us know: fundraising@samh.org.uk.

CONNECT

Staying in touch with loved ones can make us feel happier and more secure; and often just having a chat can help to lift our mood.

Coffee Morning

Social distancing doesn't mean you can't still connect! Put the kettle on and set up a virtual coffee date with your friends over your favourite video call service like Zoom, WhatsApp, or Facebook Messenger. You could even add a bake-off element to your catch up. With a virtual bake off you get the fun of baking, seeing others creations, and voting for the winner without having to give up your own creation. Talk about having your banana bread and eating it too! Ask for donations to the value of a coffee or tea and embrace this opportunity to connect with your loved ones!

Quiz time

Are you missing the chance to connect with your friends? Why not gather your A-Team and take the fun online! Nominate a quiz master or each create your own round. Set up a fundraising page such as Just Giving, and ask your friends to donate to join in. There are lots of tools you can use including Kahoot or Mentimeter. You could even include some mental health related questions like these ones from the Time to Change information.

Gaming marathon

Why not channel the wonderful world of gaming to transform lives? For many of us, gaming is how we relax, socialise, and connect with our community. Stream your gaming on Twitch as you set yourself an epic challenge and ask your friends and family to sponsor you. The quirkier and more original the better, and remember to spread the word far and wide!

BE ACTIVE

Being active isn't just good for our physical health; it's also proven to have a positive effect on our mental health and wellbeing. Setting a challenge is also a great way to fundraise.

Step by step challenge

Challenge yourself to reach 10,000 steps in the most creative way you can think of from inside your home. It might be squat jumps for the fitness fanatic, showing off those sweet dance moves, or marching on the spot while you make dinner. Share a photo or video of yourself taking part, and challenge your friends and family to sponsor you or do the same!

Virtual relay

So long as we follow social distancing rules, the outdoors isn't out of bounds. Why not join forces with friends or your running group to run a social distancing relay? In teams of 2-4, individually run your own 5K and record your time using a fitness tracker like Strava. Donate to take part, record each team's collective time, and see how all the teams fair against each other. This is perfect for those of you who love a bit of friendly competition!

Let's get physical

Keep fit while transforming lives with a fun physical challenge. It could be anything from cycling the length of the John Muir way on a stationary bike, climbing Ben Nevis (22,500 stairs) on your staircase, to doing 100 press ups a day for SAMH. Dream up a challenge, ask your friends and family for sponsorship, and keep everyone updated. You could even live stream your challenge on Facebook or tag and challenge your friends to attempt it too!

#STEPUPFORSAMH: ROSS

Ross took on the challenge of climbing three Munros from home on his staircase to fundraise for SAMH.

He chose three of Scotland's most iconic mountains: Liathach, The Saddle and Ben Nevis. The trio have a combined height of 10,188 feet. Ben Nevis alone stands at 4,413 in altitude as Scotland's highest peak - that's over three times the height of the Empire State Building!

Ahead of the challenge, Ross said "While I'd love to be out in the mountains for real, taking on this kind of challenge is the next best thing and will raise money at a vital time for SAMH."

TAKE NOTICE

Whether you're spending time with friends or taking a moment for yourself, try to stop to take notice and live in the present.

Mindfulness scavenger hunt bingo

Use one of our mindfulness scavenger hunt bingo cards and get your family and friends involved. These lists have common sights you may see in your home or when out and about. By taking the time to look out for different items, you can also help yourself stay more in the moment, which is great for your mental wellbeing. Encourage your friends and family to take part, getting them to take photos of all the items they see and the household with the most finds, wins! Set up a fundraising page and ask your friends to donate to enter.

Declutter and donate

Do you have a cupboard in your house that you prefer to pretend doesn't exist? Maybe it's filled with old toys, electronics, home wares, unwanted gifts or clothes you no longer wear. Why not spring clean for SAMH? Sell unwanted items on Ziffit, and donate the proceeds to SAMH. It's just like having your own home charity shop! Make sure all the items have been really well sanitised before you send them to their new homes. Remember to always put your health and the health of others first.

LEARN

Learning enhances your self-esteem and confidence, and can be a great way to meet new people.

Release your inner teacher!

Got a skill you think your friends and family would love to learn? Why not host a live session on Facebook, Instagram or Zoom? Ask for a donation to teach them a new craft, hobby, or skill that might help them get through these difficult times in the best way possible. From drawing, to dancing, to knitting to tips and tricks to make the best banana bread, anything is possible!

Host a digital dinner party

Are you missing catching up with your friends over a bite to eat? Why not host a virtual dinner party. Invite your friends, circulate the recipe, pick the playlist, and hop on to Zoom to share your dinner together. You could even ask your friends to donate what they might have spent on a meal out.

Cyberspace clubs

Whether it's your sports club, choir class, photography lessons, book group, yoga class, or crafting collective – reconnect with your club and bring your meet-up online. Use video platforms like Zoom to hold your normal gatherings from the comfort of home. If your class or group is already holding virtual sessions, why not ask if you can hold a special meet-up themed around mental health awareness? You could ask people to share what is helping them during these difficult times and share information. You could ask them to donate what they might have spent on class fees or drinks and snacks to SAMH.

We've created some social media images to help you to promote your #StepUpForSAMH challenge. You can download these from our website here.

GIVE

Giving can be very rewarding – in fact those who report a greater interest in helping others are more likely to rate themselves as happy.

Be a SAMH Champion

We all have mental health and helping raise awareness or starting conversations can help us reduce the stigma. Use your social networks to start the conversation about mental health to help us raise awareness. You could find a quote about mental health that means something to you; pick one of the stories from the SAMH website to share; or tell people about your own experiences tagging us in the post. Add a donate button to your Facebook post and ask your friends to show their support for Scotland's mental health. You could even start it off with a donation of your own to get the ball rolling. Check out the toolkit further on in this guide for details on resources you can share.

Virtual concert

Music is a great way to help people feel a little more connected during these difficult times. Why not take your talent to a Facebook livestream, in a mini home concert for all your friends and family. You can add a donate button to the stream and ask your viewers to support Scotland's mental health in return for your performance. Remember to share your reasons for supporting SAMH in between songs so everyone knows just how important mental health is to you.

Stay-at-home savings

For some of us, changes to our routine has meant a few small savings. Maybe it's your morning coffee or your commute to work. Whatever it is, consider donating it to SAMH and encourage your friends and family to do the same. Make a donation today.

STEPHANIE'S SAMH STORY

"I wanted to be a doctor until I was 14. You change your mind so much, but that's what I wanted to be when I was younger – that was what I was going to do.

"Then I got put into care, and the mental health services were really, really appalling, and the support I got was next to nothing. So I've been there, and I just think that things need to change and I'm going to be a part of that."
